A special grand jury was impaneled in Tazewell county the first of the week, to investigate a horse thief case. The fellow stole a horse Saturday night, was indicted Monday, sentenced to three years in the penitentiary by Judge Burns on Tuesday, and on Wednesday was taken to Joliet.

The only real anniversaries are the tin wedding, ten years; the silver wedding, twenty five years; and the gold wedding, fifty years after marriage. The diamond wedding at seventy five years is a myth, and the wooden wedding (one year) and the crystal wedding (five years) are social frauds.

Edward Phippenhouse and Louis Dudwell were discharged from the county jail yesterday, the grand jury having failed to find an indictment against them. It will be remembered that they were arrested some time ago for stealing chickens and burning fence rails belonging to a farmer in this vicinity.

A few days ago at Blue Mound, Frank Martin armed himself with a couple of revolvers, brass knuckles, etc., and circulated around the town in regular western style. When policeman Bundy attempted to arrest him, he kicked up a big rumpus and had to be caressed with a billy, before he would submit. An indictment has been returned against Martin by the grand jury for an assault with intent to kill. He has been arrested by Constable Weitzel and lodged in jail.

LETTER FROM TEXAS.

Miscellaneous Notes from the Lone Star State.

JOHNSON'S STATION, May 10, 1884.—Tarrant is one of the finest farming counties in Texas—indeed I doubt if there is a better in the state. Her high, rolling lands make abundance of grass and grain, and stock-raising is profitable. Farmers here can plow all winter, if they wish. Ice rarely ever forms, even on stagnant water, of sufficient strength to bear a man's weight.

Wheat here is in full head, corn knee high, and the prospects for a good crop most flattering. There has not been a promise of half such a crop of wheat in seven years as the present season presents. We have been having pretty heavy rains, and the farmers are all gladdened by the outlook. The health of this section is good.

Fort Worth, our county seat, is situated on the south bank of Trinity river, and is one of the greatest railroad centres in the state. It is destined to become a great shipping point for the southwest in the near future, and the country around it is fast filling up with northern emigrants, which is a blessing to the natives, as it has a tendency to make good citizens of them, or to drive them back to the territories or to Mexico for associations.

Illiteracy is fast becoming a thing of the past. The northern emigrants bring with them well defined ideas of a free school system, as the true instrumentality to war against the old southern theory that every parent should educate his own children—but didn't do it. The better element here will continue to storm the fortifications of ignorance at Austin, until a perfect system of education by public schools is inaugurated—one that will become contagious, as it were, and ultimately have all for its advocates and none as opponents.

The next legislature will be elected for this special purpose. We have enough money and land set apart for school purposes to build a school house on every section of land in the state, and give all our children a collegiate education. We could have school every month in the year, with high grade teachers, and all we want is a perfected system, and energetic and ambitious superintendents and teachers, to surmount all obstacles and put ignorance and illiteracy to flight, and substitute enlightenment and refinement.

As a mass, we are a law-abiding people. Criminals are dealt with very severely. There is no place in the loyal north where crime is more vigorously prosecuted, and justice dealt out with greater certainty and severity—not even in Cincinnati, in the state of R. B. Hayes, John Sherman, and J. Warren Keifer!

We have a fair representation of churches, and many of them are in a prosperous and flourishing condition. We have no Mormonism nor polygamy here, and wouldn't have it. It wouldn't be a very healthy climate for Latter Day Saints.

While the climate is warm in summer, we have the delightful golf breeze, and sun-strokes or deaths from excessive heat are unknown among men and animals.

Uncle James Herrell, from your county, is suffering from dropsy, and in all probability will not live long. His son, A. G. Herrell, is not favorably impressed with Texas, and will probably return to Old Macon before long. A. J. M.

The Council.

The license men came nearer gaining their point in the council last evening than at any of the previous meetings of the new council. Had one more alderman been present, their desire for license might have been gratified, but then "a miss of an inch is as good as a mile," but probably the closeness of their carrying their point, and yet failing, only served to disappoint them more. The aldermen present at the meeting last evening were Messrs. Lake, Deihl, Shoe maker, Gogerty, and Oakes, Mayor Chambers being in the chair. Ald. Roberts was out of town, and Ald. Wayne is sick abed, and an adjournment was necessary, as they liked one of being a quorum. Had one more anti-licensee man been present, it would have been an easy matter to grant license, and had Alderman Starr, Muzzy and Alexander been in their seats the council would have tied on the question, thus leaving it to Mayor Chambers' vote for a decision. Those who are more intimate with his honor, Mayor Chambers, say that he would not have voted for license under the circumstances of last evening. The anti-licensee aldermen probably foresaw yesterday afternoon the condition things were in, and had no desire to run the risk of the mayor's vote on the license question, and therefore remained away from the meeting.

Meeting in Chicago of the National Anti-Monopoly Convention—A Small Attendance.

Bon Butler Nominated for President—The Platform—A Bit of Turbulence.

New Jersey and Virginia Democrats and Michigan Prohibitionists Hold State Conventions.

Butler for President.

THE ANTI-MONOPOLIST'S CHOICE. CHICAGO, May 15.—The National Anti-Monopoly Convention was held in Forsyth Hall in this city yesterday. The call provided for four delegates from each Congressional District, or a total of 1,300 or 1,400 delegates. Between 150 and 160 only put in an appearance.

John F. Henry, Chairman of the National Committee, called the convention to order, and congratulated the delegates of the Anti-Monopoly party on assembling for the first time to nominate a President of the United States. He also called attention to the fact that at the time of meeting a financial panic, second only to that of Black Friday, was being felt in New York. He nominated for temporary Chairman Alton J. Steeter, of Illinois, who was unanimously chosen. B. F. Silvery, of Indiana, and N. C. Kilmer, of New York, were chosen temporary Secretaries. The roll of States was called, and each delegation submitted names of persons to serve on Committees on Credentials, Organization and Platform, and for Vice-Presidents of the convention.

Before the committee retired a matter was sprung which caused considerable excitement and discussion. Mr. Kilmer, of New York, presented a set of resolutions, adopted by the Executive Committee of the party in New York State, setting forth that it was inexpedient for the convention to nominate a candidate for President until it appeared whom the Republican and Democratic Conventions would nominate. That the Executive Committee should be empowered to nominate or that another convention should be called after the other two conventions were held, and that committees should be selected to attend these conventions and work in the interest of candidates acceptable to the Anti-Monopolists. A valiant but unsuccessful fight was made to have this document referred to the Committee on Platform and Credentials. It was finally tabled by a nine-tenths vote and will be taken up later. While the committee were out the remaining delegates were informally addressed by Mr. Root, of Nebraska, and Mr. Crocker, of Iowa, who predicted the evils with which the country had been afflicted on account of monopolies, and Mr. J. Childree, of Iowa, and Fogg, of Michigan, who eulogized General Butler. Mr. Root, of Nebraska, then took the floor and presented a paper on "The National Bank System and the Money Monopoly in the Country," which he referred to General Grant's recent financial downfall as "the right of the people." "The money monopoly," he said, "is the right of the people to have their money in their own hands, and not in the hands of a few monopolists." Mr. Crocker, of Iowa, followed him and eulogized General Grant as he had for the President of the United States. Mr. Childree, of Iowa, followed with an eloquent and eloquent appeal for women's rights, which was well received by the convention. She too, hoped Butler would be nominated.

Mr. Root, of Illinois, reported that the Committee on Credentials had found that there were 175 delegates entitled to seats, representing twenty States and the District of Columbia. The States were Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, California, Oregon, Missouri, Michigan, Maine, Nebraska, New York, Wisconsin, Kansas, Massachusetts, Maryland, Vermont, Pennsylvania, Colorado, Minnesota, Mississippi and New Jersey. From several of the States but one delegate was present, and two or three were represented by persons holding proxies. The committee recommended that one vote be allotted to more than one vote. Mr. Wadsworth, of Maryland, offered as a minority report that each State be allowed to cast four votes for each one of its Congressional districts. After several attempts were made to amend the minority report it was tabled and the majority report adopted.

The Committee on Organization recommended that John F. Henry, of New York, be permanent Chairman, and that the temporary Secretaries be made permanent. This was done, and the Committee on Credentials reported that the committee had found that there were 175 delegates entitled to seats, representing twenty States and the District of Columbia. The States were Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, California, Oregon, Missouri, Michigan, Maine, Nebraska, New York, Wisconsin, Kansas, Massachusetts, Maryland, Vermont, Pennsylvania, Colorado, Minnesota, Mississippi and New Jersey. Mr. Wadsworth, of Maryland, offered as a minority report that each State be allowed to cast four votes for each one of its Congressional districts. After several attempts were made to amend the minority report it was tabled and the majority report adopted.

Mr. Childree, of Wisconsin, offered a resolution expressing it as the sense of the convention that the money monopoly should be abolished. It was adopted by a large majority. Mr. Root, of Nebraska, then took the floor and presented a paper on "The National Bank System and the Money Monopoly in the Country," which he referred to General Grant's recent financial downfall as "the right of the people." "The money monopoly," he said, "is the right of the people to have their money in their own hands, and not in the hands of a few monopolists." Mr. Crocker, of Iowa, followed him and eulogized General Grant as he had for the President of the United States. Mr. Childree, of Iowa, followed with an eloquent and eloquent appeal for women's rights, which was well received by the convention. She too, hoped Butler would be nominated.

Mr. Root, of Illinois, reported that the Committee on Credentials had found that there were 175 delegates entitled to seats, representing twenty States and the District of Columbia. The States were Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, California, Oregon, Missouri, Michigan, Maine, Nebraska, New York, Wisconsin, Kansas, Massachusetts, Maryland, Vermont, Pennsylvania, Colorado, Minnesota, Mississippi and New Jersey. From several of the States but one delegate was present, and two or three were represented by persons holding proxies. The committee recommended that one vote be allotted to more than one vote. Mr. Wadsworth, of Maryland, offered as a minority report that each State be allowed to cast four votes for each one of its Congressional districts. After several attempts were made to amend the minority report it was tabled and the majority report adopted.
